
implantation/due date - confused

Posted by katykins - 2008/10/04 21:39

Hi, My name is Kate.

I have used this site for my last 2 pregnancies and found it vital for my day to day sanity. It looks different but I'm just glad it's still here!

I am now at the beginning of my 3rd pregnancy and am already confused. With my last 2 I found out quite a way into the pregnancy (9 weeks/7 weeks) but this time I realised earlier.

"Implantation" happened on the evening of 25th Sept. Is this when I start counting the 40 weeks from? Or was I already a few weeks pregnant at that point?

I have an appointment with GP next week so will probably find out but feel the need to have a due date in mind...

Can anyone help?

Re:implantation/due date - confused

Posted by katykins - 2008/10/05 22:22

A whole day and not one response? I guess there aren't as many members on this site as there used to be? Where did everybody go?

Re:implantation/due date - confused

Posted by Sunny - 2008/10/17 14:55

I guess everyone is just not yet aware that this site is back, bigger and better. We should pass the word around. I've had a good look around and, judging by my babymail being delivered right on time (and the fact everything works well), I'd say ninemonths is returning to form. I'm glad too, as I found it invaluable for my first pregnancy and now I'm about 7 weeks into my second and I'm relieved it's still here - and still just as helpful.:)

Re:implantation/due date - confused

Posted by Maia04 - 2008/10/17 18:16

Hi, You start counting the weeks from the first day of your last period. Seems a bit silly considering week 1 you haven't even concieved yet but this is how they do it.

:)
